NORWICH HISTORIC

CONNECTIONS. The Evidences of Our Storied Past Arouse Envy in Our Sister City.

Norwich is ahead of New London on places of evident historic connec-tion—that is, it is evidently so. When they had their 250th celebration of frounders' day, or whatever it was that was founded up there 250 years ago, they located the places where were houses in 1859 and attached nearly painted tablets indicating the same and the people who then lived in them, and such other tablet information. them, and such other tablet information as the place and its association warranted. These tablets are distributed through the city, but are mostly observed from the Falls-Yantic trolley line, as that seemed to have made up part of a then important Norwich highway. The commentator took a trip on that route Sunday afternoon and was mightly interested. Which started the first sentence of this comment, with the "evident" proviso. We would like to see if the New London Historical society couldn't beat viso. We would like to see if the New London Historical society couldn't beat out Norwich on its "evidences." We have some historical places ourselves that might be tableted—and ought to be tableted. Let us see if we can't some day put up a few tablets and so interest the stranger, of whom we have many. If there isn't money enough in the historical society to pay for taoleting the trolley company might help -for the more historical places on its routing the more fares it will be taking up from the sightseers.—New London

ATTORNEY GENERAL EXONERATES LIPTON No Evidence to Connect Him With Canteen Scandals.

London, July 14.—The attorney-gan-eral declared today there was no ewidence before him to justify the criminal prosecution of Sir Thomas Lipton in connection with the recent army canteen scandals, for which several army officers and employes of Lipton. Limited, were convicted on charges of accepting or giving bribes to influence contracts. mons, the attorney general said proceedings already had been taken in regard to those against whom evidence existed. No such evidence, however, existed against Sor Thomas Lipton. At the annual meeting of Liptor Limited, today Sir Thomas was at-tacked by a number of shareholders. Sir Thomas, in a speech, said no-body could attempt to justify the acts of the man who had been implicated in the canteen scandals and nobody de-plorer them more than he did. He declared such steps had been taken as would effectually prevent a recurrence of the scandals. The meeting concluded with hearty cheers and the expression of wishes for the success of Shamrock IV in its attempt to bring back the America's cup to England.
